November 2014

Latest News and Upcoming Events

We will be passing out stewardship packets on Sunday, November 2. Please take yours home at that time if possible, and prayerfully consider your financial support for this church in 2015. Packets will be mailed or dropped off to those unable to attend on the 2nd.

Our observance of All Saints' Day on November 2 will be followed by a brief memorial service at the Columbarium, where we will remember those inurned in it. All are welcome; we especially invite those whose loved ones are inurned to join us.

The deacons will host a wedding shower for Jessica Bender and Kirk Forthman at 2:30 P.M. on Sunday, November 9, in the Fellowship Hall. See page seven.

The Christian Education committee will present a panel on Mental Illness and Criminal Justice on Friday, November 14, from 6:30—8:30 P.M. See page five.

Fellowship and Hospitality will host a Thanksgiving Pot Luck Lunch after worship on Sunday, November 16. F&H will provide the turkey & gravy for this luncheon. There will be a sign-up sheet for side dishes, breads, desserts, etc., so that we don't all bring the same yummy dish. Mark your calendar for this November social as we celebrate and give thanks for family, friends and our many blessings. If you have questions, contact Lisa Upton.

Mark your calendars! The annual Christmas Pageant and potluck dinner will take place on Sunday, December 7, at a time to be announced later.

Clerk's Corner

Session met on Tuesday, October 21, 2014 at 7:00 P.M. The following actions were taken:

Approved two requests from outside organizations to use our facility (Boy Scouts and Narcotics Anonymous);

Sadly accepted Jimmy Rambur's resignation as our custodian with thanks for his many years of service to our church;

Approved giving 25% of the Peacemaking Offering to the Women's Resource Center in Norman.

Respectfully submitted,
Joan Cole, Clerk of Session

From the Pastor's Desk

Dear Friends,

The last few months, I have been working some on getting healthier. I'm eating better, seeing the appropriate doctors (who have me visiting some lab or other facility too often for my taste), trying to get enough sleep, and even occasionally exercising. That last one's the hardest for me. It's all slow in coming, but I'm working on it. I'm headed in the right direction, at least.

It is not habit, yet. I will occasionally drift over to the cabinet in my kitchen where the potato chips are located only to find that I was smart enough at the grocery store not to buy them. And then I miss them, but realize I'm making better choices. It's difficult, I'll admit.

It reminds me of how some of us (including me) can feel about church. Not all the time, mind you, but occasionally it feels like we're in a rut. We do the same thing every Sunday, sit in the same place, wish for the same hymns and expect to hear the same messages. We expect the same activities to happen at the same time each year, we expect we will volunteer the exact same way we did before. We will give the same amount of energy, time and money that we have done every year.

As I've heard somewhere, it's not bad to be in a rut, just don't furnish it and make it your home.

If you're doing the exact same things, expecting the exact same things as always, I want to challenge you. Try something new. Allow the Holy Spirit to stir things up. Don't control everything so that life is always the same. Look for a new way!

The verse from Isaiah 43:19 came to mind as I was thinking about this:

See, I am doing a new thing!
Now it springs up; do you not perceive it? (NIV)

An interesting thing happened when I went to the NRSV Bible to check my memory of the verse. It was slightly different: "I am about to do a new thing; now it springs forth, do you not perceive it?"

What difference does it make that one translation talks about God's work in the present tense, and one speaks in the future? Certainly both are true. Both speak to God's moving currently and in the future. This concept gives me comfort, knowing that any kind of rut I may place myself in is of my own choosing, not what God intends.

This does not mean there will not be times of stillness, of contentment, of peace. Quite the opposite. In those moments, we are able to experience the true love and grace of God, revel in its beauty, and move on to our next journey.

I wish and pray for you to find new ways to experience God, as we gather in the community of God.

Grace and peace,

Tracy

Memorial Presbyterian Church and NAMI* Oklahoma present a panel discussion on

Mental Illness
and Criminal Justice

Friday, November 14
6:30-8:30 P.M.

Traci Cook

The disintegration of the country's mental health hospital system and the increased use of mandatory minimum sentencing have led to the incarceration of a growing number of individuals suffering from mental illness. Jails and correctional centers have become the largest providers of treatment for mental illness in Oklahoma, while Griffin Memorial Hospital has lost one third of its treatment capacity due to funding cut backs.

Emily Virgin

Memorial Presbyterian Church, in conjunction with NAMI Oklahoma, is co-sponsoring a panel discussion on Mental Illness and Criminal Justice. The program will begin with a viewing of selected scenes from a PBS Frontline® program, The New Asylums. The panel members, each from their own perspective, will respond to the issues raised in the video. The panelists will also interact with one another, and respond to questions from the audience.

Panelists will be Steven Buck, Deputy Director, Oklahoma Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services; Traci Cook, Executive Director for National Alliance on Mental Illness (Oklahoma); Emily Virgin, Okla. House of Representatives, District 44; Susan Sharp, Ph.D., David R. Boyd Professor of Sociology, University of Oklahoma; and Lt. Cary Bryant, Crisis Team, Norman PD.

This free program is open to the community; refreshments will be served.

THE ACTIONS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE LIFE OF DWIGHT MISSION

Number 3 of 12 short articles

The Holy Spirit has called many faithful people into ministry at Dwight Mission. For those 60 missionaries who answered the call from 1830-1860 there was free room, food, and supplies – but no salaries. The organizing missionary, the Rev. Cephas Washburn, was also a traveling evangelist. He was described as "rich in faith and always abounding in the work of the Lord." The ministers, over the years, included Daniel S. Buttrick, Alfred Finney, W. M. Griffin, Frederick L. Schaub, W. L. Squirer, Worcester Willey, and Harry Wilson.

The Presbyterian Board of Missions was asked by the Rev. Washburn to hire more teachers with the following characteristics: "conscientious, persevering, industrious, and good knowledge of the human heart." Among the many teachers was an Osage, Maria James, who came to Dwight as a young child in 1822 after being found by a Cherokee chief, sold twice, and rescued by two Frenchmen from being sold into slavery. After completing her schooling she taught at Dwight until she married.

Another teacher, Miss Ellen Stetson, taught from 1821 to 1850 and also directed the Female Benevolence Society. These ladies came from as far as eight miles once a month to make items such as quilts, pin-cushions, needle-books, and braided mats. The money from the sales was used for printing religious materials in the Cherokee language.

Please support Dwight Mission in any way you can and remember Dwight in your prayers.
